Is it Important to Obtain a Language Certification?

Speaking languages is fundamental these days. On the one hand, tourism is one of the most important forms of leisure, and mastering the language of the country you are visiting can greatly enhance your travel experience. On the other hand, having a language certificate can open doors to job opportunities, scholarships, academic positions, competitive examinations, employment opportunities or simply facilitate various administrative processes. So, this qualification is essential for anyone who wishes to have all those opportunities thanks to their spoken proficiency in German, since this university program prepares students to pass the oral component of the C2 German exam, according to the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR).

The ability to communicate effectively in another language, and accredit it with an official CEFR qualification, is an essential requirement for your academic and professional development. TECH helps you achieve it with intensive 100% CEFR training"

TECH Global University

The Common European Framework of Reference for Languages is the only officially recognized and accredited system for assessing a student's level of proficiency. Although there are other certification systems, these come from private institutions and are, therefore, not officially valid. The CEFR establishes a single criterion to determine the difficulty of the courses and awards certificates that are recognized throughout the European Union.

At TECH we offer you the only intensive program designed to prepare you to obtain your official certificate based 100% on the CEFR, the only official system recognized and accepted throughout Europe.

*Master German to the highest level, accredit it and improve your future

With this preparation program you will have all the necessary contents and competences to pass the C2 Level”

Level C2 is part of the Proficient User Level, which is further divided into two sub-levels: First and Second Proficient User Levels (C1 and C2).

The descriptors graded include: is able, by reasonably employing a wide range of modification mechanisms, to accurately convey subtle nuances of meaning; has a good command of idiomatic and colloquial expressions, and is aware of the connotative level of meaning; knows how to circumvent difficulties so discreetly that the interlocutor hardly notices.

The Professional Benefits of German

German is the ninth most spoken language in the world. It is spoken in countries such as: Switzerland, Austria, Luxembourg and Belgium. And also in other parts of the world in small communities.

There is no doubt that the main reason to learn German is for work. Austria has the lowest unemployment rate of the Eurozone countries; Switzerland is one of the most affluent countries and offers excellent working conditions; the engine of Europe, Germany, offers great employment opportunities to anyone who is willing to work. However, a good level of German is a prerequisite for working in these countries. Many have tried their luck and emigrated from their home countries in search of work, but doing it without knowing German is not particularly easy.

Learning German may be just what you need to develop your career. Knowing German will also make it easier to create or maintain working relationships with German-speaking associates in your country. It will undoubtedly help to strengthen relationships and close business deals. It is also worth bearing in mind that German is the native language of one of the world's major exporting countries, and having a good command of this language allows you to perform better in business and instill greater confidence in working relationships.

Additionally, German is the second most important language for the sciences and Germany is the third most important country for its contribution to research and development. Germany awards a large number of research grants to foreign scientists and almost 20% of the world's books are written in German.

German is the native language of one of the world's major exporting countries, and having a good command of this language allows you to perform better in business”
